

Global Financial Crisis

The World economic meltdown, known as the Global Financial Crisis, has affected all of us. Individuals, companies, businesses, are all, in some way or other, affected and are likely to be into the future.

2008 was a tough year and 2009 will continue to present enormous challenges.

Our Business Law Team is well placed and experienced to advise individuals, companies and businesses in dealing with the issues that are likely to confront them in these difficult financial times. The first and most important thing to bear in mind is to not panic. There are usually solutions to most problems, particularly if they are anticipated, and appropriate planning and action is taken to mitigate the problem.

At Nevett Ford we have been advising clients for generations in all manner of businesses and personal undertakings. It is a human trait to "go to ground" when problems surface, to ignore the problem, to hope that it will simply go away. Of course it will not and generally will worsen if action is not taken.

Our advice to anyone facing difficulty or wishing to strategically plan for their business in difficult times is to maintain a positive outlook and take appropriate advice. In short, to arm yourself with the best advice and assistance you can.

It is our responsibility in advising clients to alleviate the client's anxiety and concerns and, by giving clear and objective advice, to help, whatever the circumstance.

Regrettably we know that businesses have already failed and doubtless more will follow. If you believe we can be of help then please contact one of our business lawyers or our Managing Director Peter Wilson.
